RISO, Inc. Introduces New Risograph FR Series

RISO, Inc. continuously improves on the innovation of the Digital Duplicator. We are proud to announce the new series of Risographs to be available in June 1999. As many of you saw at the Annual Kickoff Meeting in April, the three newest machines to be introduced will be the FR2950, FR3950 and FR3950α. The FR2950 will replace the GR2750, to be available in June 1999. The FR3950 and FR3950α will be available toward the end of the calendar year, subject to the manufacturing schedule.

The FR series offers an improved image processing system for improved print quality, quieter operation and a console look to be more appealing to the office environment. Additionally, the FR series introduces high performance inks and high sensitive master material. The friendly operation panel has been changed so that frequently used keys are enlarged and less frequently used keys are now located on the sub-panel. Additional new features include multi-up function which is capable of 2, 4, 8 and 16 up, Customer Programmable Preventative Maintenance Schedule and Custom Settings access from the sub-panel, such as Auto Power Off, Minimum Print Quantity and other default settings.

The FR2950 is the first in a series, which features a console appearance. The coordinating stand is included.

FR2950 has unique masters, black ink and black print cylinder. All other consumables and RISO accessories designed for GR series is also compatible with the FR series to encourage upgrading from GR to FR series at minimal investment costs. GR and FR print cylinders are compatible in both machines. GR color ink will be replaced with FR color ink over the next several months. The inks are interchangeable, GR color ink will fit into FR color cylinder and FR color ink will fit into GR color cylinder, thus easing the upgrade process.
